22 Water-Saving Tips Debuted to Help Coloradans Save 22 Gallons of Water a Day

On January 26, just less than a month after one of Colorado's most destructive fires caused in part by drought, Governor Polis and Water Education Colorado launched Water '22, a statewide, year-long initiative that implores Coloradans to take an active role in securing the state's water future. One of the key ways Water '22 asks Coloradans to engage is by taking a pledge to engage in "22 Ways to Care for Colorado Water in 2022," which includes simple actions that can save at least 22 gallons of water per day while keeping waterways clean. This amounts to 8,000 gallons a year for every Coloradan or 48 billion gallons a year across Colorado, which will help protect and preserve the state's rivers, watersheds, and water supplies. The Water '22 campaign was created to educate Coloradans about how the state's water is one of its most important resources and to encourage conservation and protection in order to mitigate the impacts of climate change, which has led to persistent drought conditions. Those conditions helped fuel the most damaging fire in the state's history in late December, as well as the three largest wildfires on record which burned in 2020, causing degradation to forested watersheds where 80% of Colorado's water supply originates. Increased water awareness is a fundamental step in helping Coloradans understand the risks to a sustainable water future and the need to work together innovatively to stretch scarce supplies.
